Starting to gather information and numbers for budget

Cut trees West Richmondville

Christmas decorations are down

We've been doing maintenance on equipment, prepping for storms, storm cleanups

We have tried testing meters, we were able to test some, but are not using it to the fullest of our capabilities. My computer at the barn is old, and running Windows 7. For some reason it will not open the file to update the software. It appears to be missing a file, and finding support for Windows 7 that is trustworthy, is tough.

We have qualified for Qualified Electric Personnel, which is one of the two safety training courses required for our positions as linemen.

I am going to start reaching out to companies that will bore and lay conduit underground, to get prices in order to run the Winegard Road line under the railroad trestle, and get it out of the field that it is currently in. Trees keep coming down on that line, and the poles will need replacement in the next few years, anyways. It is difficult to work in that field due to it being on a hill, and it is often wet, muddy, or snow.

We have been fairly busy doing work for customers, hooking up services, fixing yard lights, fixing wires.

I plan on mapping out some more on Diamond maps, now that winter is here. I am hoping to do 2 books this year.
